Midwest Energy News - Is coal ash safe to use on roads? Some experts are not so sure - 3/10/14 - Coal ash, the residue from burning coal to generate electricity, is abundant, and cheap. And it's one way that at least some Midwestern communities provide traction on snowy and icy roads. But what's left behind in the nearby water and soil when this byproduct from coal-fired power plants is spread on roads? <http://www.midwestenergynews.com/2014/03/10/is-coal-ash-safe-to-use-on-roads-some-experts-are-not-so-sure/>

Des Moines Register - Heavy snowpack renews worries of river flooding - 3/8/14 - The mountain snowpack in the Missouri River's upper basin is close to levels seen before devastating 2011 flooding along the river, but a repeat this year isn't likely, an Army Corps of Engineers official said.
